We have studied the ultrafast charge separation dynamics in a light-harvesting artificial photosynthetic antenna composed of CdSe quantum dots. Time-resolved transient absorption of the antenna is observed at 520 nm when an excitation is given by a violet pulse. The transient absorption at 520 nm changes following the same trend as the transient absorption at 568 nm. It is shown that the mechanism of the apparent charge separation that occurs at 520 nm is the same as that in the conventional light-harvesting mechanism. The efficiency of the apparent charge separation is estimated to be 20-25% of the overall primary charge separation. It is inferred that the apparent charge separation is not simply a superposition of the primary and secondary charge separations.Q: implementing reader in my program I need to implement a basic reader in my program. The only thing I know how to do is int and double. I've tried to take out the int and double and leave in just a string. Nothing happens when I run the program. Can anyone assist me with this? I am following a tutorial. Shouldn't it work? I have tried to use input just as a normal character, and it doesn't work either.
